 1. Gameplan: Fee based organizations are jointly asking for a fee increase this year.
 2. Spend your money but make it meaningful.
 3. Reached out to chair of OAF (Ethan) for the Collegiate Readership Program, OAF has said that the program is under Student Government domain so we are supposed to be looking at making the program more sustainable. We've looked towards digital subscriptions currently.
- ii. Athletic Fee emergency clause meeting is Friday (Nov. 22).
- iii. Laura/U&I wants to do a Week of Welcome in the Spring, and are asking if we would like to participate. Talking more with her tomorrow.
- iv. Coarse Threads committee is presenting to UGC the week after we get back. We are meeting to discuss the reflection piece of the program tomorrow and we want the ExComm. suggestions. What form should the piece take?
 1. A written form; an 8-15 page essay that ties the course threads together/the time spent in the classes.
 2. A presentation
 3. A poster-board that visually ties the learning together and it is presented at a posterboard faire.
 - a. Feedback:
 - i. Rollings: I think the essay is best for a clear-cut plan and structurally sound for people to really explore their experiences.
 - ii. Wren: I'm leaning towards the poster-board conference that engages students and fosters interest from other students that might want to participate. Public interest is good.
 - iii. Montufar: I like the idea of the presentation, I feel more inclined to see others present. I just don't know how some topics might translate to a visual representation of a board.
 - iv. Barker: I think the essay and presentation is the best way. It's a scholarly and well-rounded approach.
 - v. White: Students can insert essays into their portfolios.
 - vi. Holt: All three of these options provide a different level of accessibility; I would like a way for all three to be incorporated to accommodate for people with differing strengths or situations.

vii. Leppanen: I like essays, but also the Student Research Conference might be a good avenue for presentations.

Adjourned: 9:34 P.M.
